

What is the State Review Team (SRT)?

- The Department of Human Resources' State Review Team (SRT) conducts initial State disability determinations for individuals who have not been federally determined to have a disability.

When is a Medicaid Waiver Application referred to the SRT?

- When an individual applies for a DDA Waiver program, the Eligibility Determination Division (EDD) refers the individual to the SRT when they do not have any federal benefits (Social Security Income (SSI), SSDI, Railroad or Veterans Administration).
- In order for a person to be enrolled in a DDA Waiver program they must have a federal or State disability determination.

How will an individual know that they are referred to the SRT?

- The SRT will send a letter to the individual and/or their representative(s) if they are referred to SRT. In addition to the letter, the individual will receive a packet of forms that need to be completed and returned to the SRT for review.

What documents are needed for a SRT review?

- Consent for Release of Medical Records Form DHR/FIA 161
- Customer Declaration of Disability Form DHR/FIA 700
- Disability Report Form DHR/FIA 3368
- Substantial Gainful Activity Worksheet OES 06
- Authorization and Consent Form DHR/FIA 827

How long does it take for the SRT to review a Medicaid Waiver Application?

- It normally takes 60 days for the SRT to make a disability determination. This time, however, can be delayed if the individual does not submit the required paperwork in a timely manner.

What happens if an individual is determined “Not Disabled”?

- In these cases, if a person is determined “Not Disabled” by the SRT, they will not be eligible for the waiver. The person can appeal and ask for reconsideration.

Who does the individual contact if they have questions regarding their SRT review status?

- If an individual has any questions or concerns related to their SRT review process, they can contact their EDD Case Manager.
